Factors in the work environment that effect worker outcomes like occupational stress include perceived organizational support and conflict management style. The purpose of this non-experimental study was to examine the conflict management style emergency department (ED) nurses use to resolve conflict and how conflict management style and perceived organizational support affects their experience of stress. Using a correlational design, this study examined factors such as perceived organizational support, and conflict management style and their relationship to OS in a sample of 222 ED staff nurses. The Expanded Nurse Stress Scale, the Survey of Perceived Organizational Support and the Rahim Organizational Conflict Inventory-II were used to measure these variables. Significant relationships were found between perceived organizational support and OS ( $r = -.292, p = .000$ ) and avoidant conflict management style and OS ( $r = .300, p = .000$ ). No significant relationships were found between integrating, dominating, and obliging dimensions of conflict management styles and OS. Regression analysis demonstrated that perceived organizational support and avoidant conflict management style were independently related to OS ([beta] =  $-.262, p = .003$ , [beta] =  $.209, p = .018$ ). Perceived organizational support and avoidant conflict management style explained 15% of the variance in OS. However, perceived organizational support did not moderate any of the hypothesized relationships between the dimensions of conflict management style and OS. Ancillary analysis revealed that perceived organizational support and avoidant conflict management style were significantly related to several dimensions of stress including the problems with supervisors dimension of stress ( $r = .433, p = .01$ ) and both independently predicted stress from problems with supervisors while controlling for the effect of each other ([beta] =  $.15, p = .01$ , [beta] =  $.47, p = .01$ ). These findings suggest that the nurse's approach to resolving conflict with her supervisor(s) does indeed correlate with her experience of stress. Perceived organizational support and avoidant conflict management style are predictors of OS and assessment of the ED staff nurse's conflict management style and coaching in constructive conflict resolution may be helpful in the their experience of OS. Renegotiating Health Care Resolving Conflict to Build Collaboration John Wiley & Sons Renegotiating Health Care Since the first edition of Renegotiating Health Care was published in 1995, new treatments, technologies, business models, reimbursement methods, and regulations have tangibly transformed the substance of health care negotiation. Norton & Company Presenting theories about why humankind, despite its efforts for peace, is in a perpetual state of conflict, the members of the Stanford Center on Conflict and Negotiation consider the obstacles to and processes for harmonious communication The Future of Nursing Leading Change, Advancing Health National Academies Press The Future of Nursing explores how nurses' roles, responsibilities, and education should change significantly to meet the increased demand for care that will be created by health care reform and to advance improvements in America's increasingly complex health system. At more than 3 million in number, nurses make up the single largest segment of the health care work force. They also spend the greatest amount of time in delivering patient care as a profession. Nurses therefore have valuable insights and unique abilities to contribute as partners with other health care professionals in improving the quality and safety of care as envisioned in the Affordable Care Act (ACA) enacted this year. Nurses should be fully engaged with other health professionals and assume leadership roles in redesigning care in the United States. To ensure its members are well-prepared, the profession should institute residency training for nurses, increase the percentage of nurses who attain a bachelor's degree to 80 percent by 2020, and double the number who pursue doctorates. Furthermore, regulatory and institutional obstacles -- including limits on nurses' scope of practice -- should be removed so that the health system can reap the full benefit of nurses' training, skills, and knowledge in patient care. In this book, the Institute of Medicine makes recommendations for an action-oriented blueprint for the future of nursing. Leading and Managing in Nursing - Revised Reprint Elsevier Health Sciences Leading and Managing in Nursing, 5th Edition - Revised Reprint by Patricia Yoder-Wise successfully blends evidence-based guidelines with practical application.
