It was found that ca. 83% of all US AFDC households participated in the Food Stamp Program (FSP) in fiscal 1986, with participation rates ranging from ca. 93% (Michigan) to ca. 59% (Virginia). It also was found that such intra-state differences were due to differences in how states count household income to judge program eligibility. Detailed information on national participation rates and on reasons for nonparticipation are included. Ancillary information on the variance among state participation rates and possible reasons for the low participation rate observed for Virginia is appended. Illustrations and copious data also are included.* Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations for 2005 Hearings Before a Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, House of Representatives, One Hundred Eighth Congress, Second Session Building a Foundation for Families Fighting Hunger, Investing in Children : Hearing Before the Committee on the Budget, House of Representatives, One Hundred Eleventh Congress, First Session, Hearing Held in Washington, DC, February 12, 2009 An Assessment of the Pre-enrollment Nutrition Status and Diet Quality of Food Stamp Eligible Older Adults Administration's welfare reform proposal joint hearings before the Welfare Reform Subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture, Committee on Education and Labor, Committee on Ways and Means, U.S. House of Representatives, Ninety-fifth Congress, first session, on H.R. 9030... Food Stamp Program Various Factors Have Led to Declining Participation DIANE Publishing Participation in the Food Stamp Program has dropped over the last few years. These USDA estimates have come under critical scrutiny in part because the number of infants and postpartum women who have actually enrolled in the program has exceeded the number estimated to be eligible by as much as 20 to 30 percent. These high "coverage rates" have led some members of Congress to conclude that some people who participate are truly ineligible, and that funding could be reduced somewhat and still meet the needs of truly eligible persons who wish to participate. But some advocates and state WIC agencies believe that the estimates of the number of eligible persons are too low and more people who are eligible and want to participate could do so. In response to these concerns, the Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) of the USDA asked the Committee on National Statistics of the National Research Council to convene a panel of experts to review the methods used to estimate the number of people nationwide who are eligible and likely to participate in the WIC program. The panel's charge is to review currently used and alternative data and methods for estimating income eligibility, adjunctive eligibility from participation in other public assistance programs, nutritional risk, and participation if the program is fully funded. Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance, 1999 DIANE Publishing *Contains 1,412 assistance programs administered by 57 Federal agencies in agriculture, crime control, education, employment and training, health and human services, housing and homeownership, and science and technology.
